

Poultry Science[®]

Corporate support of the Poultry Science Association provides funding for the production of Poultry Science[®]. With corporate support, PSA's publication, Poultry Science[®], draws the latest research from scientists in industry and academia and keeps researchers throughout the world abreast of the ever-changing industry.

For more than 75 years, Poultry Science[®] has maintained a level of prestige that ranks it among the top in its field. Poultry Science[®] ranks as the sixth most cited agriculture, dairy and animal science journal. With the continued growth of scientific information, the poultry industry will continue to expand well into the 21st century.

For nearly 30 years, Corporate Members of the Poultry Science Association have supported the production of Poultry Science[®]. Annually, there are about 30 companies from the poultry industry and allied industries in the corporate membership program. If your company is connected to or has an interest in poultry science or the poultry industry, you should consider PSA Corporate Membership.

Since its founding in 1908, PSA has been dedicated to promoting the advancement of knowledge and technology in poultry science. PSA meetings and publications foster dialogue concerning poultry nutrition; breeding and genetics; environment and health; extension and education; formulation, stability, and improvement of food products; and processing and industry concerns.

BENEFITS of Corporate Membership

- Visibility: Corporate members will be listed prominently on the back cover of every issue of Poultry Science[®], on the PSA website, and in the Annual Meeting program.

Journal of Applied Poultry Research

Purpose and Scope:

Journal of Applied Poultry Research (JAPR) provides practical, reliable, and timely information to those whose livelihood is derived from the commercial production of poultry and those whose research benefits this sector. This journal addresses topics of near-term application based on studies and critical observations, encourages scientific approaches to practical problem solving, and presents information that is comprehensible to a broad readership. JAPR publishes original research reports, field reports, and reviews on breeding, hatching, health and disease, layer management, meat bird processing and products, meat bird management, microbiology, food safety, nutrition, environment, sanitation, welfare, and economics.

Intended Readership:

The readers of JAPR are in education, extension, industry, and government, including research, teaching, administration, veterinary medicine, management, production, quality assurance, products development, and technical services. Nutritionists, breeder flock supervisors, production managers, microbiologists, laboratory personnel, food safety and sanitation managers, poultry processing researchers, feed manufacturers, and egg producers use JAPR to keep up with current applied poultry research.
